FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The IIC at The HR Networking Group Conference

Coaches make the best platform for sharing knowledge, information, experience, and solutions in the HR area. At least - according to CEO's, directors, managers and corporate specialists.

In late January, The IIC was invited to The HR Networking Groups Warsaw conference in Poland, along with three other top Coaching Accreditation Bodies in Poland.

The HR Networking Groups Warsaw conference is designed to open communication channels between businesses and their HR Departments, and to create a space to understand and solve potential problems. What better way is there to open communication channels, facilitate new perspectives, and address problem areas than with a Professional Coach?

Each Coaching Accreditation Body spoke about developing and accomplishing goals, the key elements coaching uses to address these issues, and how Coaching styles and Coaching organizations differ. A great thank you goes out to The IIC's own Head of Poland: Zbigniew Brzezinski, for doing a great job representing The IIC.

If you want to learn about Professional Coaching, identifying and accomplishing your own goals, and what Professional Coaching can do for you, please visit our website.

The IIC would like to thank the European Mentoring and Coaching Council, the International Coach Federation, and the International Coaching Community for sharing the stage with us in Warsaw. Finally, we would especially like to thank the The HR Networking Group for inviting us to the January Warsaw conference.

In 1999 a group of concerned coaches came together to establish the IIC, originally formed as the ECI, under the leadership of Ben Botes as the original founder and CEO. Ben was ably supported by Aina Egeberg who was head of Erikson Coach Training in the UK. The initial focus was on life coaching but this was quickly changed to embrace all areas of coaching, including Business, Executive, and Corporate of coach-ing. The current President and Vice President joined in 2002 and stepped into their leadership roles a year later.
